The Rich History of Rensselaer and the Hartford Campus

Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute is America’s oldest technological research university. We employ the world’s newest approaches to leadership, engineering, computer science, and information technology.

From its inception in 1955, Rensselaer at Hartford has delivered graduate-level degree programs and advanced professional education designed specifically for current and future strategic leaders and professionals. Our program content flows from Rensselaer’s research strengths, scholarship, and unique academic programs, and is more market-oriented than traditional academic programs.

Global Outlook and Experience

We are the only university in the area with a global perspective and we are dedicated to providing an interactive learning environment for students who are seeking cutting-edge knowledge and high-level capabilities while they hone their leadership competencies and enhance their analytical and innovative thinking. With dramatic increases in the rate of change, working professionals expect and demand an academic environment that fits their evolving needs in a fast-paced world.

Faculty Excellence

Rensselaer faculty are uniquely qualified to develop and deliver our Master’s degree programs. Not only do they have extensive published research portfolios, they have also consulted and held positions at Fortune 100 and international corporations and started successful business ventures.

Through the development and delivery of Rensselaer’s graduate international residency programs, faculty have spent considerable time abroad assimilating the nuances of business and financial practices in developed countries such as Italy and Germany, and in emerging markets such as China and Brazil. They continue to incorporate the knowledge and information derived from international contacts into Rensselaer’s programs. They also have a deep understanding of the needs of working professionals who must balance their professional, academic, and personal lives.

Alumni Who Lead Change

With over 95,000 alumni, including 20,000 from the Hartford campus, our graduates change the world every day. Our goal is to have Rensselaer graduates — strategic leaders, senior professionals, managers, entrepreneurs, and individuals with high potential — become architects of their futures and significant contributors to their organizations and society.
